

Raise A Purple Finger For Freedom

Dec 12 - Dec 15

Show Solidarity with Free Iraqis in Their Upcoming Election

www.purplefingerforfreedom.org

On December 15, the people of Iraq will do what no American should ever have to contemplate. They will risk their lives to vote. For the third time this year, the brave people of Iraq will go to the polls to determine their future. This time they will do so to elect a new government under the constitution that they approved in an October referendum.

On January 30, 2005, AP photographer Andrew Parsons took this iconic photo to the left of an Iraqi woman flashing a "V" for victory after she voted. Her finger stained purple by poll workers to show that she voted became a symbol of defiance to the terrorists, a symbol of pride, and a symbol of freedom. Last January, 10 year-old Shelby Dangerfield from Montana demonstrated her solidarity with the freedom-loving Iraqis by inking her finger. Join Bill Bennett and other radio hosts who are encouraging Americans to follow her example by asking them to ink their right index finger purple from December 12-15 to show support for the freedom loving people of Iraq as they prepare to vote on December 15th.

Here is what your organization can to do to show support for a free Iraq

1. From December 12 - 15 ink your right index finger purple or wear a purple ribbon.
2. Encourage your members to do the same.
3. Ask supporters to email photos of themselves flashing their "Purple Finger 'V' for Victory in Iraq to Pictures@PurpleFingerForFreedom.org for posting to the www.purplefingerforfreedom.org web site.
4. Ask supporters to visit www.purplefingerforfreedom.org
5. Include a story in your newsletter or email update.
6. Ask supporters to encourage local schools in the district to download the Purple Finger for Freedom Model Lesson plan from the website and ask teachers to teach a current events class about the upcoming Iraqi election.
